1 · The six pricing tricks — and how often they occur

Counted across 564 hand-researched dossiers; every count is backed by an evidence sentence in the public dataset (CC BY 4.0).

Usage-based (metered) pricing 260 van 564 tools

Credits, message counts, overage fees or percentage cuts on top of the plan. Fair when the meter is public; dangerous when it's buried. Always model your real volume before trusting the sticker.

Per-seat pricing 134 van 564 tools

The bill scales with every user you add — a quiet tax on growth. Ask: does value really scale with headcount here? Flat-fee alternatives exist in most categories.

Paid add-ons 158 van 564 tools

Key features sold separately: payroll on top of bookkeeping, verification on top of email. Price the bundle you actually need, never the base plan.

Annual lock-in 127 van 564 tools

The advertised price only exists with a yearly commitment. You carry the risk: a year paid before you know if the tool sticks. Compute the monthly-billing premium before deciding.

Quote-only (hidden) pricing 33 van 564 tools

No public price list — a sales call required. Enables per-customer pricing and makes comparison impossible. Budget serious evaluation time, and never enter that call without an anchor.

Renewal jump 15 van 564 tools

The intro price is not the renewal price — standing practice in hosting and security. The only number that matters is year two. Put the renewal date in your calendar with a cancel window.

2 · The numbers (October 2026)

Tools with ≥1 documented cost caveat	78%
Meters usage on top of the subscription	46%
Charges per seat	24%
Sells key features as paid add-ons	28%
Requires annual commitment for the advertised price	23%
Publishes no usable price at all	6%
Has a genuinely free tier	35%

> Only 22% of tools have a sticker price that is also the whole story. Full methodology & live data: https://aibuildermarketplace.com/research/

3 · The honest buyer's checklist

1. Find the real price: your volume, your seat count, the add-ons you need — not the sticker.
2. Check the meter: what happens at 2× your current usage? At 10×?
3. Read the renewal terms before the intro price seduces you. Year two is the real price.
4. Genuinely free tier? Test the actual workflow on it before paying anything.
5. Cancel-test: how many clicks to leave? If you can't find out, that's your answer.
6. One tool per job: name the job each subscription owns. Two tools, one job = one candidate to kill.
7. Calendar every renewal date with a 2-week cancel window (our free Renewal Radar generates the reminders).
8. Verify claims against evidence — ours or anyone's. A review without receipts is an ad.

> The cancel-first test: unsure about a subscription? Cancel it. Re-subscribe if you genuinely miss it within a month. Most people never do — that silence is the honest verdict.
